A certified mediator since 2002, Jo Levy brings a wealth of in-house, international, and technology expertise to help parties resolve disputes efficiently and effectively. Known for fairness, integrity, she has served as a mediator with the Northern District of California for 15 years, mediating approximately 30 cases ranging from copyright, trademark, and business disputes to civil rights and consumer actions. She successfully draws upon her many years of executive leadership roles at Intel Corporation where she developed deep technological and business acumen, cultural and international acuity, and the communication skills to facilitate business resolutions that foster ongoing business relations. As a law firm partner and litigation attorney, Jo has arbitrated and mediated over 50 matters, including cases involving technology transactions, patents, trademark, copyright, aviation, product liability, medical devices, class action, and personal injury lawsuits filed in federal and state courts, private contractual disputes, and before the ICC. She is also on the national roster of arbitrators for the American Arbitration Association for commercial, IP, technology, and consumer arbitrations.
